

INVITATION

You are invited to benefit from need-response, which is a new professional service for resolving needs. All other institutions focus more on relieving pain of our unmet needs, which risks leaving us in more pain.

Only need-response aims to fully resolve needs to remove cause for pain. This can bring out more of our potential for social love, or mutual respect for each other. Need-response encourages me to now demonstrate my loving respect for your stated needs.

Is there anything I can do to improve how I respect you and your needs?

I will await your response before I express how I think you can improve your respect for me and my needs, unless you prefer I express that now."

RESPONSE

When responding to this invitation to respond better to your needs, it helps if you can keep it...

1. simple, not complicated,
2. easy, not too challenging,
3. brief, won't take too long, and
4. meaningful, satisfies a need.

Examples of what the sender could do for you:

- express overdue gratitude;
- give a hug;
- apologize for something;
- listen and show you understand;
- give and take a complement.
